Athlete trainers and coaches often put immense efforts to precondition and strengthen the muscles related to landing and pivoting so as to alleviate the strain on the knee. When playing a high ACL tear risk sport, such as football, the athlete should aim to keep the chest high and over knees, bend from the hips and knees, keep knees over toes, facing straight forward and learn to land like a feather from high jumps. Rehabilitation and surgical management, as outlined in this post can be a very long and arduous process, so prevention of ACL tears is a primary focus.
