today I just wanted to share a little piece of advice that has really helped me with something that I have been struggling with lately. lately time management has been hard for me and I've been feeling quite stressed. with this I had to reevaluate thing that I'm doing to work on this. so something that I have done in the past that I have decided to bring back is my task prioritization list. In this list I prioritize my task into 4 categories, urgent and important, important but not urgent, not important but urgent, and not important and not urgent. this helps me clearly see what has to get done right then and there and tackle these important tasks.
