the prototype of the dihydropyridine class of calcium channel blockers, is similar to other dihydropyridines including amlodipine, felodipine, isradipine, and nicardipine. CCBs target L-type calcium channels, the major channel in muscle cells that mediates contraction. Similar to other DHP CCBs, nifedipine binds directly to inactive calcium channels stabilizing their inactive conformation. Since arterial smooth muscle depolarizations are longer in duration than cardiac muscle depolarizations, inactive channels are more prevalent in smooth muscle cells.
