The reasoning is simple, science creates business which leads to policy and commerce. By having the people who lay the ground work for businesses in the room will help steer our direction in a safer manner. When it comes to Cannabis, there aren't enough medical professionals and scientists testifying before our government and reaching out to elected officials to help. Without that influence it can lead to detrimental affects in terms of public health and safety which has been seen in legal states. These issues can simply be curved and avoided with the right legislation in place, but lawmakers need to consolidate that with these professionals.
