I can almost guarantee in the next few weeks you will see so many posts, snaps, and tweets from those receiving offers. My advice is to keep your cards close to your chest- those that are important to you will find out eventually- all those other strangers don't need to know! Some of your friends will surprise you with their level of support and some will be really unhelpful and won't understand- this is a time for you to keep those that understand close! Usually, medics and dentists can understand each other quite well in terms of the application and difficulties of it- it's normal to get rejections whereas on other courses it's quite rare- don't be disheartened. Also, you don't know half of these people posting about getting offers- they most likely are fake! Take everything you see on the internet with a pinch of salt!
