Research shows that In children, breastfeeding has been associated with improved cognitive performance and socio-affective responding. Improved cognitive performance in children is linked to the fatty acids (i. e., LC-PUFAs) contained in breastmilk and their potential beneficial effect on brain development during infancy, especially concerning the growth of white matter tracts (myelination). Heightened socio-affective responding seen in breastfed children is possibly connected to the stimulation of the oxytocin system and oxytocin's known role in promoting positive affect and approach behaviors, while reducing stress and avoidance behavior. In mothers, breastfeeding significantly reduces physiological and subjective stress, facilitates positive affect, and improves maternal sensitivity and care. Breast milk provides abundant and easily absorbed nutritional components, antioxidants, enzymes, immune properties, and live antibodies from mother. These antibodies enter her milk to help protect her baby from illness. Immunoglobulin A coats the lining of the baby's intestines helping germs and allergens from leaking through. Breastmilk also contains substances that naturally soothe child. hormones oxytocin and prolactin
