As I've fell in love with daily improve, I've come to the realization social media is nothing more than a mere distraction from the present life we live. Chances are the majority (not all) of the people who follow you don't value your well being, let alone will bring ever happiness to your life. A quick dopamine hit from notifications via IG won't enhance your life as much as it may seem. Most the people don't even care about you. They're just nosey & wanna watch your life. Its no secret most kids you went to school with & friends and family will keep up to date with your posts/stories but won't even have the time of day to reach out or press their thumb on a heart button. Complete strangers you've never met a day in your life will be the ones to support you like they know you & encourage you. Don't worry I've got big moves & ALOT of stuff in the works for real ones. Just understand my approach this time around is completely different. When things start paying off fake f*cks better not come out the wood work saying they was always down.
