Back by popular demand! Re-posting this (accidentally) deleted series of photos "Diagnosing gout in a small hospital". POCUS showed an effusion behind the patellar tendon- disproving prepatellar bursitis. Our lab tech showed us how to use the polarized filter which gives the pretty crystal pictures. The medieval demon photo (chewing on the 1st MTP joint) was added for comic effect...and for our biggest fan Maggie we added the medieval (12th century Canterbury) cure for gout. In this case we opted for a less complex therapeutic regime because the local pharmacies no longer compound prescriptions. Mastebolin (Alpha Pharma) 10amps 100mg/1ml.
