How important are elevated hormones (within natural levels) for building muscle?

Following a bout of resistance training (RT), so long as the volume and intensity is adequate, acute increases in hormones which trigger anabolic processes such as testosterone, growth hormone and IGF-1 have been seen to occur. With the magnitude of these acute elevations also being affected by variables outside of training such as an individual's age, training experience, nutritional intake, gender and baseline hormone values (Kraemer, 2005).

Changes in chronic resting testosterone concentrations resulting from RT appear to be mixed, with some research showing elevated resting concentrations from performing RT and others showing no change. However, this might be due to periods of high RT volumes and intensity which cause fluctuations of testosterone concentrations (Kraemer, 2005). Chronic resting concentrations of growth hormone and IGF-1 do not appear to be constantly elevated from RT, unless during high volume and intensity phases. Overall, it appears elevated resting hormone levels occur during periods of high-volume and intensity training, such as an over-reaching phase, however, returning to base-line levels during regular training phases (Kraemer, 2005).

Our tactic is entirely diverse and stresses that your self-discipline and commitment to the program are the solutions to attaining top results. Our package is based on a four-phase program that can and will get you amazing results during the days of your diet if you follow the directives. Logically your success is reliant on you following the instructions provided. The 4 phases will be explained thoroughly, but in brief, they are Phase 1: loading days, Phase 2: 800 calorie days, Phase 3: Stabilization, and Phase 4: keeping the weight off. #Ttt #testosterone #tshot #hormonebalance #hormones #testosteronereplacementtherapy #testosteronebooster #testosteronetherapy #hcg #onsteroids #mentalhealthawareness #mensfashion #mentalhealthmatters #testosteron #igf1 #peptide #peptidetherapy #semorelintherapy #ipamorelin #gac #gacinjections #bcaa
