Studies show that temperature changes can have a profound effect on levels of testosterone and estrogen and by extension, on fertility. There's a lot of confusion outside the scientific community, however, about how these effects are mediated. Their main route of effects are by changing blood flow and the delivery (or shunting away) of hormones to the gonads. BUT: It's most important to keep in mind that all changes in blood flow caused by temperature- or exercise for that matter, are neural in origin. That is, your hormones levels are ultimately controlled by neurons. Once you understand that, you can start to exert more control over these incredibly powerful systems in your brain and body.
