First of all, I take up space from people who need to use that facility, and there is only one restroom for disabled persons. Also, it's not super hygienic, as there is no bench or the like where I can put my clothes while changing, and not hooks enough to hang all my stuff. I could try to squeeze into one of the other restrooms, but they are small and cramped and it would be even less hygienic. . . Ah, and in this particular case I btw also take up room from people who need to change their kids' nappies, 'cause that's the same room. And even though I'm not able-bodied I'm just not a big fan of it being implied that my body is "too complicated" for the changing rooms, just because I'm transgender.
