What does this mean for me as a medical student? It means I can now upload my lecture notes as a PDF side by side my markdown notes. Then, when an image or diagram comes up in the slide deck, I simply hit the ⌘control⌘ key, select the image, and pin it into my notes. What ⌘s incredible is that when I ⌘m practicing my flashcards and feel stumped on a concept, I simply click the pin which takes me directly back to the slide the content was mentioned on. I cannot describe how powerful that is as a student who constantly has to sift through old notes to consolidate new learning.??Swipe to see it in action! look at here

Thank God for providing me with the strength to make it through this week. First and foremost, I officially made it through my second block of medical. I am only one block away from being a second-year medical student and starting rotations. I also had the privilege of serving as a panelist with my friends @dangeriya @nuhanaqvi @jkannzzz and talked about our journey of going from Fellows to Advocates with @letstalkreform. Not to mention, I woke up at 6:30 am this morning to present at DGNN's weekly research meeting. To top it off this eventful week, I was able to speak with the future physicians as a panelist for the annual National Institute of Mental Health Pre-Med workshop. It's a full-circle moment because I was in their position last year, and now I can share my experiences. It is so rewarding to answer questions like "Can I wear my natural hair for interviews?" or "How does my MCAT impact my application?" with confidence because I have been through the process. Moral of the story: enjoy the process, and every win (big or small) deserves to be celebrated. see this site
