A physical therapist or other rehab professional that doesn't ever squat, deadlift, sprint, or swing a kettlebell is like a mechanic who only ever drives their car at 30mph.

Hard to give advice on exercise when you don't have any practical experience pushing your own body.

Ultimately the level of and willingness to reflect and confront current practices had great importance for the ability to maintain the new lifestyle changes in order to correlate them to ones core values in life. The deeper the connection to ones core values, the easier the changes will be to maintain, why the practice of meaningful dialogue shows its place and value. □
