WHAT ONE THING WILL
THIS YEAR TO IMPROVE HEALTH?

When I realize where I came from and the struggles I being through, I'm so proud that I made it this far. Now everyday isn't a nightmare but a blessing I'm so thankful for everyday, for my family & friends and of course for every struggle I being through because it made me who I am today. There where so many times that I wanted to give up and I didn't because it's not worth it to give up! In 2020 I finally started to love myself now I have so much more peace with myself, now I know that there is no better love than selflove. I also started hormone therapy and every little change makes me realize how blessed I am! Everyday I see how beautiful life is, I try to surround myself with positivity because life can be short so I try to enjoy every moment. So 2020 was a very dificult year because of COVID 19 and some other struggles along the way but I also learned a lot of things. I learned how important it is to enjoy every little moment because we can be gone soon, I also learned how to connect with myself and love myself. find more

So the LA times and countless other news outlets are reporting that EMS workers in Los Angeles are not to transport cardiac and stroke patients back to the hospital who have a slim chance of survival due to the hospitals being over run with COVID-19. A directive was also given to administer less oxygen as the pandemic has put a strain on supplies. Resuscitation attempts within the hospital put many workers at a greater risk, but does this mean its time to implement a version of the triage "START" (Simple Triage and Rapid Treatment) system?
