EPIDURAL STEROID INJECTION

PMA
Pain Management Associates, PC

Indication

Epidural steroid injections may be used for a variety of pain syndromes. These may include back pain, postherpetic neuralgia, disc disease, spinal stenosis, or as a diagnostic procedure. The areas in which we inject the steroid are the neck, thoracic, lumbar or caudal region. The determination for the area injected will depend upon the location of the pain.

Benefit

The introduction of anesthetics and steroids into the epidural space may reduce inflammation and associated pain of irritated nerves or bulging discs.

Preparation

1. You MUST have a ride home.
2. Inform the doctor or nurses if you take any blood thinning medications (e.g., aspirin, Coumadin, Plavix, etc).
3. You may have an I.V. as a part of your procedure if you are having sedation. However, all procedures performed in our office are NOT sedated.

Complications

Possible complications may include: backache, headache, nerve irritation or temporary numbness (paralysis) bleeding, allergic reaction to the medications (rare) or nerve or spinal cord injury (rare). Steroids can occasionally cause brief flu-like symptoms, weight gain or insomnia. If you are diabetic, your blood sugar (glucose) may rise for a few days.

What To Expect After Treatment

1. Temporary fluctuations or decreased blood pressure.
2. Your legs may temporarily feel weak or numb; a few hours.
3. You may have some soreness at the injection site or fullness in the back.
4. You may have difficulty with urination for a short time after the procedure is done.

The First Few Days After Treatment

An injection to reduce inflammation takes up to five days to reach maximum effectiveness.

1. Monitor your blood sugar if you are diabetic. Steroids can increase blood glucose levels.
2. Don't exercise vigorously.
3. Rest if needed, but get up and move around after sitting for a half an hour.

When to Call Your Doctor

Call immediately if you notice any of the following symptoms:

- New severe pain
- Persistent new headaches
- Fever or chills
- Loss of bladder control or numbness that persists or worsens beyond a few hours
- Significant redness or swelling around the injection site

Always keep your physician and/or nurse informed of how you are feeling and how you are being treated. Your well being is our PRIMARY CONCERN.
