Today, we have an international prostate cancer expert, Dr. Judd Moul, from Duke University, making a second appearance on the podcast. Dr. Moul helped us kick off the initial launch of the podcast as the guest for episode two, one of our most popular episodes to date, covering prostate-specific antigen, a man's check engine light. For our listeners who have not yet met Dr. Moul, he is an expert when it comes to prostate cancer. He joined the Duke University faculty in 2004, after a career in the US Army Medical Corps, mainly at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. He is a retired Colonel and noted researcher and clinician in the area of prostate cancer. He has authored and co-authored more than 275 scientific manuscripts and book chapters. He served as the editor for Prostate Cancer and Prostatic Disease Journal and is a popular speaker and lecturer, having been a visiting professor and keynote speaker throughout the US and the world. Be sure to listen in to find out all you need to know about testosterone and prostate cancer. this site
