In fourth grade I started to see changes happening in my body. Little breast buds forming and my mom buying me my first training bra. I held off wearing it until fifth grade when it was no longer acceptable for my breasts to show through my shirt. I started my period and life changed in ways I wanted to kick and scream at. Though I didn't and kept a lot in. My two best friends at the time were boys and they weren't changing in any ways from what I could see. But I would hear them say sometimes how they hated the sound of their voice on recordings. Or that they wanted to try a new hairstyle out or get their ears pierced but they were too afraid of what their parents might say or not allow them to do. As we grew up I never really knew what kinds of changes they were going through, I just knew that we were different. When the sex talk happened at school we had to be separated by girls and boys and when we came out it felt like we weren't allowed to talk about what was said in our rooms. By sixth grade we no longer were allowed to have sleep overs together because we may start having sexual intercourse naturally because we are male and female... after sixth grade there was middle school and that's a WHOLE other story.
