A brief explanation of the x3 bar and an example push day workout. One exercise per muscle group for one set to full muscular failure. Variable resistance training is superior to static weights because it gives you more resistance at your strongest range of motion, which prevents you from being held back from what you can only lift at the weakest. It cuts down workout times by not having to drive to the gym and not needing multiple sets and multiple exercises for each muscle group. The goal is maximum efficiency for muscle stimulation and growth. It also makes you injury resistant and can be taken anywhere. I've worked out with the x3bar exclusively for all my resistance based training for almost the last two years. I've gained over 35 pounds and am the biggest and strongest I've been in my life. With an old weight lifting background. Pretty good for someone who works out under 20 minutes a day ☐. Check out @drjaquish's page for more information. He also just released the book "Weight Lifting Is a Waste of Time: So Is Cardio, and There's a Better Way to Have the Body You Want." A current top seller online.
